

Natural Language Processing

Text Processing

Natural language processing, or NLP, enables computers to work with human language. Common preprocessing operations include tokenization, normalization, and removing unnecessary text.

Embeddings

Text embeddings represent words, sentences, or documents as numerical vectors. Similar meanings can be represented by vectors that are close to one another in an embedding space.

Language Applications

NLP is used for sentiment analysis, text classification, information retrieval, question answering, summarization, and conversational systems.